

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008

In the year 697 CE the women of Ireland were exempted from battle through the influence of St. Adamnan at the synod of Tara. Before that time they might fulfill battle obligations when their extended families lacked sons. Women gained protection from battle, but as a result lost the right to inherit land (except in special situations), for they no longer defended it.

Litt S2008