

<([[{This is the first of the Really Big Announcement Flyers.}])>
(That flyer last Monday was an announcement of the Announcement Flyers—technically not one of them.)

Please announce to your Lit/Lang classes (or follow the practice that nearly all your peers are rumored to follow and read this short notice verbatim)

BOOKS ARE OPENED . . . BOOKS ARE CLOSED,
TOPPED OFF TANKS EVENTUALLY RUN DRY,
HUMANS WALK ON 4 LEGS, THEN 2, THEN 3,

“If this be proved a lie, then Shakespeare never Writ”

CHAUCER FINALLY LAID ASIDE THE QUILL (AFTER FIRST RETRACTING ALL IMPORTANT WORK);
BOSWELL SMILED (AND PATTED HIS STOMACH) AS HE SENT THE LAST PAGE OF THE LIFE OFF TO THE PRESS; EVEN BEN FRANKLIN KNEW WHERE TO GO AFTER
THE KITE HAD BURNED AND CRASHED.

(dramatic pause)

A Semester begins . . . and then there is the Workshop/Bash.

The Date and Time are Set for the REALLY, Really Big
Lit/Lang Holiday Workshop Bash

Thursday, 15 December 1994 is the date.

4:30 to 6:00 is the time.

A very swanky location will be announced (as soon as one is located).

There will be Food, Music, Awards, Cheerful Faculty (the semester will be virtually over),
And more. . . .

If you care to bring your own dish, please feel free to do so. Don't try to feed everyone, just something to whet appetites. Or Bring Nothing at all but yourself near the end of a gruelling semester.

[To Any Lit\Lang Student who finds this flier lying around (or digs it out of the recycling bin): it goes without saying that you should nag your professor into reading this announcement—verbatim—to your class. Thank you. The Flyer Committee]
