

please announce to your classes

Everyone is invited to attend:

the Really REALLY BIG

Lit\Lang End-of-Term Workshop BASH

Friday, 29 April 1994

Around 4:30 (after the play see below)

Somewhere to be announced (probably lower K-wing)

Highlights include:

food, awards, good cheer, and . . .

a splendid production of Jean Tardieu's one act play:

THEY ALONE KNOW

4:00 PM

M-Wing Experimental Theater

In the past food has been an important element in the workshop/bash; perhaps this has something to do with the interrelatedness of the four principle temperaments—the sanguine, the phlegmatic, the choleric, and the melancholic—and proper food, and a happy intellectual status. Perhaps not. Regardless, we hope for much good food once again.

Past favorites have included: meat balls (now wheatballs), cheeses in glorious varieties, fruits, veggie platters, cookies, pasta salads, pig cookies (at Christmas), more cookies, cakes, and other stuff.

Remember, bring simple goodies to pass (smile) or just show up.

As in the first flyer, poetry seems to most appropriately express the high emotions of the moment. Just yesterday, as they sat down to an inspirational meal of cabbage and peas, the flyer committee was reminded of the following fine piece of verse.

from The Country Parson

With heart compact as truth the cabbage stands,
With trickling gems bedropt in twinkling play;
There nodding onions rang'd like marshall'd bands.
The sluggard carrot sleeps his days in bed;
The crippled pea alone that cannot stand;
With vegetable marrow, rich and grand.

John Bidlake, from ``The Country Parson''

Remember, if your professor has not announced this flyer verbatim, please ask her/him to start again. Thank you.
